Charles M. Schwartz, MD
was a distinguished orthopaedic surgeon and a leader in the field of total joint replacement surgery. While many of his colleagues remember his “rough” exterior, many more fondly recall the heart of gold that was just beneath the surface, always ready to help anyone who needed him. He is particularly remembered for his ability to communicate with his elderly group of patients and gain their total confidence.

Dr. Schwartz received his undergraduate degree from the University of Wisconsin, Madison and his medical degree from Chicago Medical School in 1974. He completed his residency in Orthopaedic Surgery in 1979 at Loyola University Medical Center. After completing a trauma fellowship in Toronto with Dr. Joseph Schatzker and Dr. Marvin Tile, and a total joint fellowship at Harvard with Dr. Clement Sledge, he joined the staff of Loyola University Medical Center. He then steadily built his practice in total joint replacement surgery. It grew rapidly because of enthusiastic referrals from grateful patients and colleagues. Promoted to Associate Professor in 1984, Dr. Schwartz also served as Chief of Orthopaedic Surgery at Hines Veterans Administration Hospital. He left Loyola University Medical Center in August, 1993 to begin a private practice at MacNeal Hospital, Berwyn, Illinois, bringing his most difficult cases back to Loyola.

A member of the Chicago Medical Society, the Illinois State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, Dr. Schwartz was an instructor for numerous national and international symposiums and courses and, when he wasn’t on the golf course, also provided physician services for the Muscular Dystrophy Association Summer Camp.

Dr. Schwartz died at the age of 47 in February 1994 of an acute asthmatic episode but his many contributions to orthopaedic surgery and to Loyola live on and are remembered fondly by his family, his legion of friends and his associates.

Evan L. Flatow, MD
Evan L. Flatow, MD, is President of Mount Sinai West, part of the Mount Sinai Health System. Prior to this appointment, he served since 2006 as the Bernard J. Lasker Professor of Orthopaedic Surgery, Chair of the Leni and Peter W. May Department of Orthopaedic Surgery at the Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai, and Director of the Orthopaedic Surgery Service at The Mount Sinai Hospital. A nationally and internationally recognized leader in shoulder surgery, he has made many clinical, educational, and research contributions to the care of shoulder disorders.

Since joining Mount Sinai in 1998, Dr. Flatow has established an internationally renowned shoulder service, training numerous shoulder fellow and residents. He, along with others, helped to develop a comprehensive shoulder replacement system that is widely used by shoulder surgeons around the world. Dr. Flatow established a tendon basic science research group at Mount Sinai, serving as principal investigator on a National Institutes of Health R01 grant based on a new animal model of tendon damage. Dr. Flatow spent the 11 years previous to joining Mount Sinai on the faculty of Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

A 1977 graduate of Princeton University, Dr. Flatow received his medical degree from Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1981. He completed a surgical residency at Roosevelt Hospital, and an orthopaedic residency and a year of shoulder fellowship under the direction of Charles S. Neer, II, MD, at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

Dr. Flatow has received numerous honors and awards, and has written or edited five books and more than 170 articles and book chapters. He has served as President of America Shoulder & Elbow Surgeons, Chair of the Trustees of the Journal of Shoulder and Elbow Surgery, and as Chair of the Publications Committee and of the Council on Education of the American Academy of Orthopaedic Surgeons.
