Sritich
School of Medicine

Strong numbers, vital mission.

The following pages provide an overview of 2012 data for education, research, financial, and giving categories. The information is presented with gratitude to the many donors who support Stritch and its students. Thank you for sharing a vital commitment to the future of health care.

During the fiscal year ending June 30, 2012, Loyola University Chicago Stritch School of Medicine continued its commitment to educating future physicians and researchers who are widely recognized as leaders in their professions.

Under the leadership of Linda Brubaker, MD, MS, FACS, FACOG, appointed dean and chief diversity officer in November 2011, the Stritch School of Medicine built upon its Catholic heritage and Jesuit traditions of ethical behavior and scholarly distinction in research and education. As it has since 1909, when Loyola University Chicago created its first medical department, the school stays the course toward the achievement and application of new knowledge that advances our mission, globally, and in the communities we serve.

EDUCATION | Programs and Institutes

Neiswanger Institute for Bioethics & Health Policy

More than 200 students participated and enrolled in the Neiswanger Institute Online Bioethics Graduate Programs and the Honors Program in Bioethics & Professionalism.

Eight students obtained a Master of Public Health Degree in 2012

Master of Public Health Program

Loyola University Chicago graduated its second class of its online public health master's degree program. The program addresses health care disparities through public health research, clinical practice, and advocacy.

In 2012, eight students obtained a Master of Public Health Degree: four graduated with a concentration in epidemiology, 4 with a concentration in public health policy and management.

In spring 2012, there were 37 students enrolled in the MPH program. Another 64 entered the program in the fall.

Ralph P. Leischner, Jr., MD, Institute for Medical Education

Twenty individuals have graduated with a Certificate in Academic Medicine, designed to provide a foundation in academic skills and leadership.

An average of 40 individuals attended the Leischner Institute's monthly faculty development programs on best practices and strategies for effective teaching.

Military Medical Student Elective Program

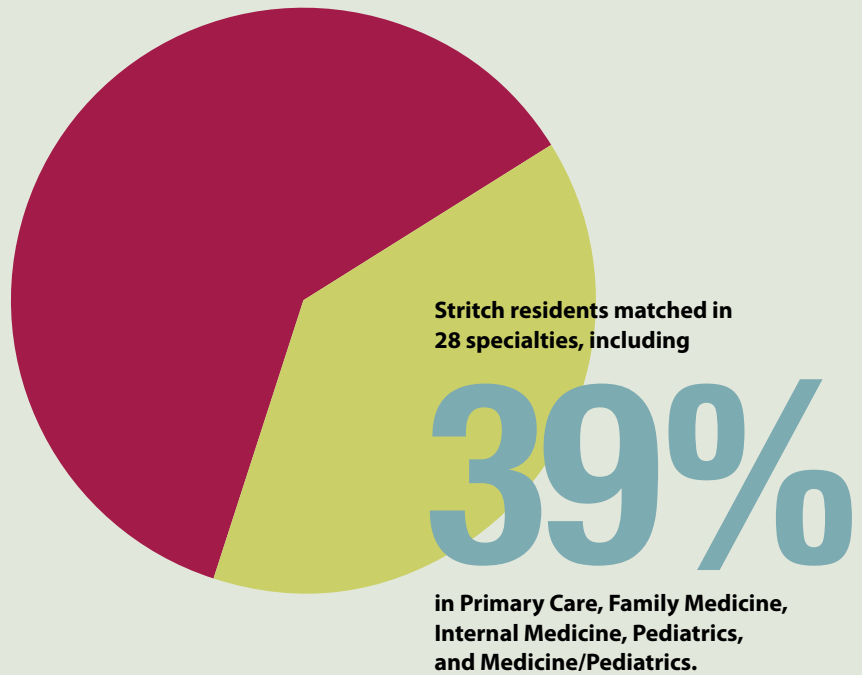

In 2012, 30 students from area medical schools took part in program sessions, during which they discussed and reflected on their future obligations as doctors and officers in the United States Armed Forces.

Medical Student Research

The Student Training in Approaches to Research (STAR) Program, an eight-week summer experience available following the first year of medical school, continued to grow.

STAR students are eligible to continue their research training throughout medical school by enrolling in the Honors in Research Program. Participation in this program continues to grow in both enrollment and graduation. In 2008, one medical student graduated with honors in research; in 2012, 21 graduated with honors in research.

The number of students pursuing the combined MD/PhD degree has risen from 10 in 2008 to 18 in 2012.

Alumni Gifts

Alumni support is critical to Stritch's academic excellence. Class participation represents the percentage of alumni donors who make a gift in a given year.

During fiscal year 2012, more than 1,229 Stritch alumni, representing 20% of more than 6,000 total Stritch living alumni, made a gift to support the school.

The Damen Society recognizes alumni and friends who supported Loyola University Chicago with gifts of $1,000 or more. The following lists all alumni and friends of Stritch School of Medicine who were Damen Society members in the fiscal year.

The Society of the Shield honors Loyola alumni and friends who have thoughtfully remembered Loyola in their estate plans and/or have made a deferred gift to the University. The following list of individuals includes Stritch alumni who are Society of the Shield members, as well as non-Stritch-alumni Society of the Shield members who have allocated at least a portion of their planned gift to a Stritch allocation.

Estate Gifts

It is with great honor and appreciation that Stritch remembers the generosity of these alumni and friends who have helped through a legacy gift to Stritch.
